Asset Class Recap

Global developed equity markets rallied over the most recent fiscal quarter ended July 31, 2021 with the ongoing vaccine rollout, restrictions on activity being further eased in many developed markets, and continued fiscal stimulus. Coupled with encouraging corporate and economic reports, these developments helped overshadow short bouts of volatility amid concerns that inflation may be less transitory and the rapid spread of the Delta variant. While equity markets continued to rally towards all-time highs, bond markets painted a contrasting picture during the fiscal quarter with the 10-year U.S. Treasury yield falling to their lowest levels since February of 2020. However, the decline in yields may have been due to technical factors. Strong demand during the fiscal quarter may have overwhelmed bond supply as the U.S. Treasury opted to use up some of the cash it built up during the pandemic instead of issuing larger amounts of debt. Emerging markets put in a less productive three-month period as Chinese equities, the largest weighting in the MSCI Emerging Markets Index, sold off in July. Equity markets in the country were under pressure due to increased regulatory scrutiny of technology and education companies. Global macro strategies, as measured by the IQ Hedge Global Macro Beta Index, rose 1.6 percent during the fiscal quarter ended July 31, 2021. Global macro strategies underperformed global equities, as measured by the MSCI ACWI index, which increased 3.6 percent, and also underperformed bonds, as measured by the Bloomberg Barclays Aggregate Bond index, which added 2.2 percent.

(holding notional weight*: 5.08 percent). This option increased 19.9 percent since being added in early May. Outside the U.S., the Fund received positive contributions from international equities in the most recent fiscal quarter. This includes the iShares Hedged MSCI Germany ETF (HEWG) (holding weight*: 0.98 percent), which increased 3.1 percent. However, the exposure to emerging markets detracted from Fund performance as the iShares MSCI Emerging Markets ETF (EEM) (holding weight*: 1.67 percent) fell 4.0 percent in the same time period. Despite the disappointing fiscal quarter, the Sub-Adviser retained the positions as they still have confidence in the long term growth potential of the exposure. Also within the growth asset strategy, the high-yield bond exposure detracted from relative Fund performance. To begin the fiscal quarter, the Fund held the SPDR Bloomberg Barclays High Yield Bond ETF (JNK) (holding weight**: 4.68 percent). By late June the Sub-Adviser sold the position in JNK as a result of substantial spread tightening. During the fiscal quarter this exposure increased just 1.0 percent, underperforming the benchmark.

To begin the fiscal year, the largest short within the defensive asset strategy and the Fund was dedicated to developed ex-U.S. bonds. However, throughout the fiscal year, the Sub-Adviser reduced the short position resulting in a net long exposure to developed ex-U.S. bonds. The trend continued in the most recent fiscal quarter as the Sub-Adviser continued to add to this exposure through the end of June. However, in July, the Sub-Adviser divested all of the exposure to ex-U.S. bonds and went short. The exposure to developed ex-U.S. bonds positively contributed to Fund performance early in the fiscal quarter, but detracted in July as global bond yields continued to fall. The largest allocation within the defensive asset strategy, which was the allocation to U.S. government bonds, was the strongest contributor to positive Fund performance over the fiscal quarter as U.S. Treasuries rallied. Over the fiscal quarter, the yield on the 10-year U.S. Treasury fell 40 basis points, positively affecting the price of government bonds.

Allocation Review

The Fund began the fiscal year with the lowest allocation to the growth asset strategy since March 2020. As global equity risk subsided, the Sub-Adviser added to the growth asset strategy throughout the year and hit a high of approximately 58 percent at the beginning of June. However, the allocation eased slightly to close the fiscal quarter as equity markets hit all-time highs. The Sub-Adviser also added to the defensive asset strategy early in the period but lowered the allocation in the final month of the fiscal quarter as equity markets continued to rally and yields broadly fell. The Fund's defensive asset strategy has historically contributed to Fund performance amid spikes in volatility but was also able to contribute to positive performance amid a relatively lower volatility environment due to falling yields. As a result of the substantial increase in both consensus inflation and the Sub-Adviser's own internal measures of inflation, the allocation to the real asset strategy more than doubled in the most recent fiscal quarter, positively contributing to Fund performance.

The real assets strategy, while the smallest allocation in the Fund, contributed to Fund performance in the fiscal quarter. The goal of the strategy is to hedge against inflation while also providing potential diversification benefits. This was implemented through commodities via the iShares Commodities Select Strategy ETF (COMT) (holding weight*: 7.24 percent), which increased 8.5 percent. The diversifying strategy also positively contributed to Fund performance over the fiscal quarter, adding 2 basis points to Fund performance.

Sub-Adviser Outlook

The Sub-Adviser is optimistic for opportunities within the various asset categories the Fund invests in for the rest of 2021. The Sub-Adviser remains steadfast in its belief that this volatility-targeted strategy may provide investors with more consistent returns than traditional asset classes. It believes that through the flexibility of the strategy and the use of alternative investments, the Fund may provide what may be considered attractive returns with lower systematic risk and lower correlation than traditional equity investments.

Holdings Insights

The growth asset strategy was the strongest contributor to positive Fund performance over the most recent fiscal quarter ended July 31, 2021. The largest exposure within the growth asset strategy was dedicated to U.S. equities. This was partially achieved through the SPDR S&P 500 ETF Trust (SPY) (holding weight*: 24.87 percent). Over the most recent fiscal quarter, SPY rose 5.5 percent. The exposure to the S&P 500 was also achieved through writing out of the money call options on the S&P 500. For example, the Fund held the S&P 500 Index Sept 21 $4,380 Call option (ESU1C 4380)
